- Hep B Learning Module
(CME & CNE offered)
The Learning Module address key topics including:
 - What is Hep B and why is it an issue in New Jersey?
 - What are the issues with perinatal transmission? Besides the mother, how else can an infant acquire HBV?
 - How are pregnant women with HBV identified and what prenatal care is recommended?
 - Best practices at delivery centers to achieve universal HBV birth dose administration
 - Importance of HBV testing in infants born to HBV positive mothers
 - To view the Module, please visit <http://bit.ly/perinatalhepB>.
- Food Insecurity & Child Health in New Jersey
(CME Offered)
This presentation is intended to enhance the capacity of pediatric health care providers to implement screening for food insecurity, identify patients and families who may be food insecure, and link those in need with community-based nutrition assistance resources.
- Preventing Elevated Blood Lead Levels in Children
(CME offered)
The NJAAP in partnership with the NJDOH has created an educational video for healthcare providers that highlights the importance of conducting blood lead level tests for children. Elevated blood lead levels is one of the most preventable pediatric environmental health issues in the United States today.
